

UPSTATE INTERACTIVE

SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT
CASE STUDIES

UPSTATE INTERACTIVE

OUR PROCESS

DISCOVERY

Spec-out company goals and technical requirements

DESIGN

Concept mockups, collaborative wireframing
and user testing

DEVELOPMENT

Agile implementation through rapid iteration and accelerated feedback loops

CASE STUDY: RedRibbon

BACKGROUND

RedRibbon is the first up-to-date, local resource directory designed to assist those impacted by HIV

Their goal is to become the centralized directory of local services for all communities impacted by HIV and to do that they needed a web design and content team that could make their vision a reality.

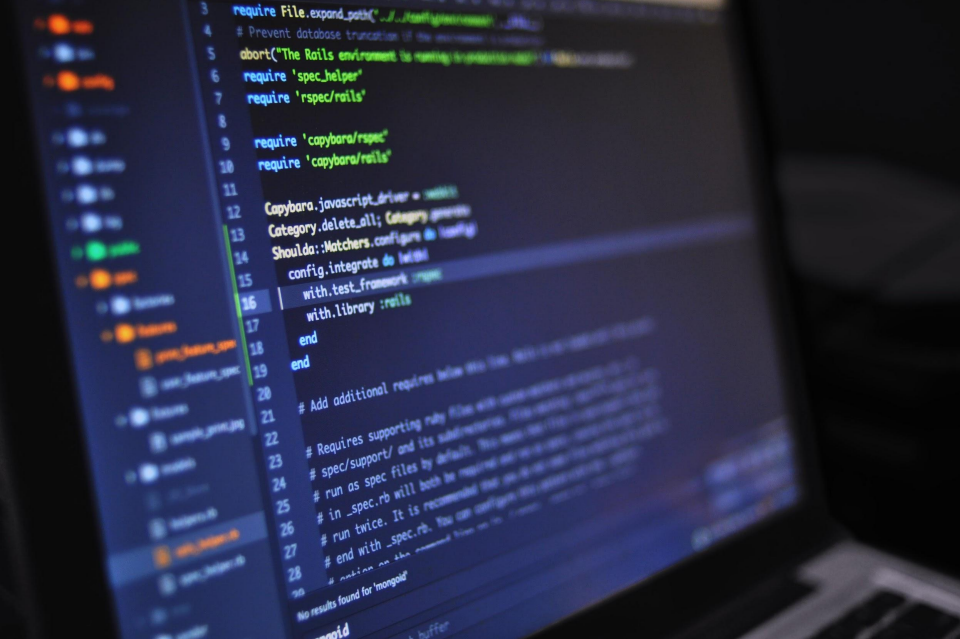

CASE STUDY: RedRibbon

THE PRODUCT

Compiling information on case managers, food pantries, medicine and more is no easy task.

As a community driven platform Brent and Andrew, the founders, needed to take their message to the people.

The RedRibbon team had a rough mock up of their site but needed a mobile friendly, easily updateable resource directory for HIV community and their supporters.

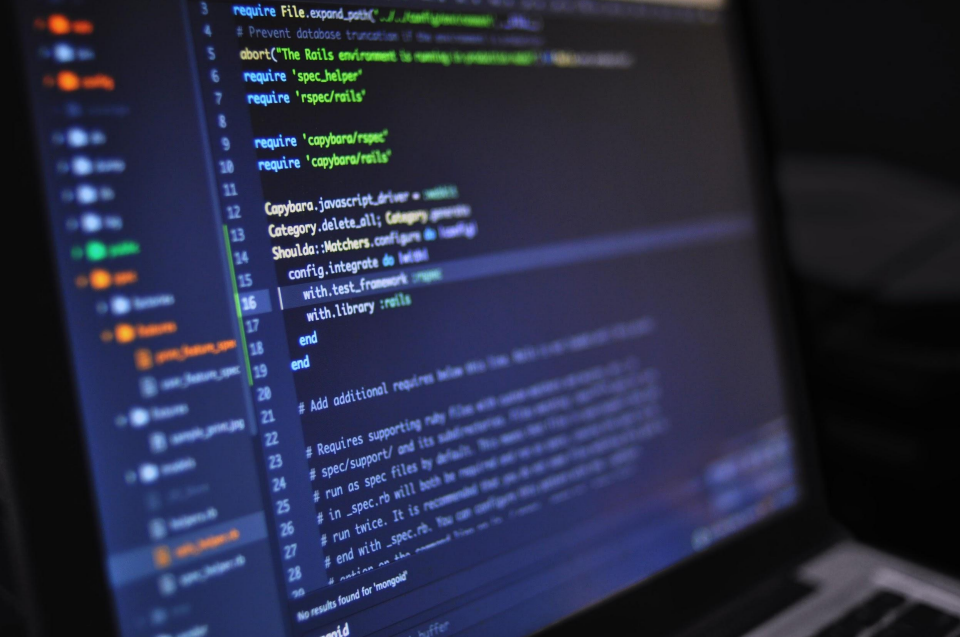

CASE STUDY: RedRibbon

THE CHALLENGE

Prior to Upstate Interactive, RedRibbon was able to build a prototype of their service, but they needed a robust application to take their product to the next level.

The tool needed to be simple enough for them to manage, allow for elements of user interaction, all while proving privacy and anonymity.

Sponsorship space and capabilities were another focal point of the application as Red Ribbon is funded through grants and donations.

CASE STUDY: RedRibbon

THE WEBSITE

RedRibbon.us was launched in September 2017. Designed to be easily navigable, highly accessible and community driven, we are excited to see how the new application grows their organization.

So far RedRibbon hosts information for Dallas, TX but has already begun expanding to Austin, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

With their new app, the sky's the limit.

CASE STUDY: RedRibbon

TESTIMONIAL

“You always worry about the intangibles when looking for the right agency. The guys at Upstate Interactive went above and beyond to way exceeded my expectations.

- Brent Bednarik, CEO